

Angela Panzone

September 25, 1945 - August 11, 2024

Angela was born in Brooklyn to Joseph and Florence Blanche. Angie had much adversity in her life but with her perseverance she was able to overcome or adjust her life to it.

Angie married Bobby and left for a new life in Queens. She made many lifelong friends both in her neighborhood and church.

Angie worked on Wall Street and loved the experience and made many friends. She retired to have a family. Jeanine was her only child, and Angie only wanted the best for her. Angie was proud of Jeanine and her accomplishments.

Angie went back into the work force and worked for Catholic Charities and Queens Community House for the Aged. Again, new friendships were added to her long list. She was so kind and loving that people gravitated to her and cherished their friendship with her.

Angie loved to travel, which took her all around the world. She shared these adventures with Bobby and Jeanine.

Angie also had a keen eye for color and decorating. Her home was beautiful, and she enjoyed entertaining family and friends.

In her later years she recently moved into a senior living complex. She loved all its amenities and again new friendships developed. Unfortunately, she was diagnosed with cancer soon after moving in. She fought a valiant battle but lost in the end. She handled each crisis with grace.

She will be missed by all her family and friends. May she rest in peace.

“ To my dear friend Angela. We have been friends for over 50 years and truly say we never had bad words between us we were always there for each other and that's what true friends are you were my true friend. Even though you were going through some real bad times you never complained. Angela I love and will miss you very much.

RIP my DEAR FRIEND.

“Angela was a beloved friend who became chosen family over the years. She and I met in 1992 when we worked together at Forest Hills Community House (later Queens Community House), a social service organization. Among the good people drawn to this work, Angie always stood out for the purity of her devotion to others and drive to do good. At work and with neighbors, she was always seeking to do the best for others. She never asked for anything for herself, and even called me once from the hospital because she met someone who she thought I could help. Our family was the greatest beneficiary of her generous soul when she did me a favor after our son was born and our childcare fell through by offering to watch him until we figure something out. The something turned into a lifelong friendship as she and our son Larry bonded for life. She cared for him for the next 12 years and as we grew closer, our families celebrated holidays and life events together right through her last Christmas. Larry adored her as a grandmother. Her love and prayers sustained us through good and difficult times, and her influence on his growth guided him to be an ethical man, dedicated to service of others. Our older children and our grandchildren all came to love Angie and always asked about her if she missed a family event.

Angela was one of a kind. She was a devout Catholic. Her prayers had power, whether it was asking Saint Anthony to find lost keys or the Supreme Being for positive outcomes of serious situations. She never missed a Mass, watching broadcasts when she was unable to get to church in person, and prayed daily for those she loved and cared for (and never for herself). At the same time, she was open and accepting of all people of faith as well as those with no faith. Her loving soul saw only good in people and was deeply appreciative of even the smallest kindnesses. She was one of the hardest workers I know, holding down multiple jobs while maintaining a spotless and beautiful home, raising Jeanine and Larry.

At the same time, she was spunky, fun and could be salty. She loved beautiful things (that somehow she always found on sale). Every home she decorated was beautiful; she was my main source of advice on decorating, designing and the best ways to clean. She loved to travel. She was an amazing cook and hostess. She enjoyed going out with friends and family.

Angela made friends everywhere who were drawn to her warmth, her positive spirit and her sense of fun. She came home from every trip with new friends, made friends at the gym, at work, at church and of course in her communities. She loved to connect people to each other; she shared news of her friends with each of us so that we felt connected even if we never met.

Angie was priceless to our family; she was the big sister I never had, a third grandma to our Larry and called my husband Saul her boyfriend. She deeply appreciate the support of Sarah in her times of need and took her to her heart as a friend. She reveled in the joys and accomplishments of her niece Sheryl and nephew Josh and Josh's children were her greatest joy in her later years. She loved to share good news and it always included some clever saying or beautiful photo of them. She kept me informed of our mutual friend Annie who knew her heart well and kept us connected through her. Geri was her rock and not only sustained her in difficult times but also was her model and dearest friend. She would often say when we complimented her that "Geri does it better". Angie's love for her daughter Jeanine was fierce and powerful. She fought for her to have the best and to be challenged by opportunities and was so proud when Jeanine rose to succeed in athletics, in school and at work where she has held down two jobs (as her parents did for many years). And Bobby, her husband of 54 years, was Angie's match in fun and desire to help others.

We will miss Angie more than I can express. She was an angel on earth and now in heaven.
