“ My father was a Renaissance Man, living in the 20th Century:

He build a garage with his own hands. He tuned cars and installed appliances

He fixed all manner of mechanical things. He collected cameras, developed his own prints, and often took beautiful landscape photographs. He wrote a book on municipal finance and a short memoir of growing up on an Army base.

Then in the evenings, he enjoyed all manner of classical music, one of his favorites being Aida by Giuseppe Verdi

“ Art Hausker told me when I was 20: "Toots, I've always tried to teach you never to judge a man 'til you've walked a mile in his shoes." Subtle yet powerful words to live by -- and I fully intend to do just that. Thanks, Dad.
